The thing that I relay want to address is that I worked at UO3 [Plant], I worked at Purex, I worked at the processing plants and than I went to the tank farms back in January 2003 and yes I know we are not talking about the tank farms tonight, but we need to go back to that because in January 2003, It was stated to the workers that Ammonia was the only concern in gross organics. To date DOE and CH2M Hill came up with a list of 52 potential chemicals that workers may be exposed to. A lot of the workers have had health problems and some of the workers took it upon our selves to breakdown the chemicals from routed of entry, symptoms and target organs. This needs to looked at on your page 12 where you stated the chemicals they need to be broken down, the workers need to b protected. Also the tank farms started medical screenings of the workers. If you are going to start these programs you need to include the workers in this type of screening. That's it thank you.
