Another article on our salmon study came out in the Tri-City Herald today. The author did not directly reference the NRTC (he knows the study is being done for the council), but otherwise I think it's well written and gives the project some good press (there was a nice photo of the lab set-up that went with the article that's not included on the website). You can find the article at <http://www.hanfordnews.com/>, under "latest headlines". This site is also a good source for other Hanford related articles.
